Responses to consultation reveal sector's priorities for the future

The Museums Association's Museums 2020 campaign [2] has prompted a thought-provoking debate over what areas of work museums should prioritise in the future.

Last year the MA held a consultation with the sector into its Museums 2020 discussion paper [3]. In all, 62 museums, organisations and individuals sent full written responses, while a further 113 people handed in responses after attending a series of Museums 2020 workshops.

These have been collated into a consultation report [4] published this week which will inform a final vision for the sector due out this summer. The Museums 2020 is currently undertaking further research into what the public thinks [5] about museums. The results of this will be published next month.
